

Being Bengali

At home and in the world

Edited by
Mridula Nath Chakraborty

Sondersammelgebiet
Volks- & Völkerkunde
in Zusammenarbeit mit der DFG

Contents

Acknowledgements	xiii
Notes on contributors	xiv
Being Bengali: at home and in the world: some speculations MRIDULA NATH CHAKRABORTY	1
1 The University of Dhaka and national identity formation in Bangladesh FAKRUL ALAM	11
2 Does caste matter in Bengal? Examining the myth of Bengali exceptionalism SEKHAR BANDYOPADHYAY	32
3 Producing and reproducing the New Woman: a note on the prefix 're' SIBAJI BANDYOPADHYAY	48
4 The refugee woman and the new woman: (en)gendering middle-class Bengali modernity and the city in Satyajit Ray's Mahanagar (The Big City 1963) PAULOMI CHAKRABORTY	69
5 Revisioning the subject of intimacy: Rabindranath Tagore and postcolonial habitations SUBHAJIT CHATTERJEE	92
6 Ethical responsibility and the spectres of demonic sacralisation in Swami Vivekananda VIJAY MISHRA	114
7 In pursuit of the 'authentic' Bengali: impressions and observations of a contested diaspora NAYANIKA MOOKHERJEE	140

xii Contents

8	Being Bengali abroad: identity politics among the Bengali community in Britain ALI RIAZ	159
9	Eternal Bengal RANABIR SAMADDAR	181
10	Bengal(is) in the house: the politics of national culture in Pakistan, 1947–71 SAADIA TOOR	202
	Index	234