

Crisis Communication

in a Digital World

EDITED BY

MARK SHEEHAN AND DEIRDRE QUINN-ALLAN

Sondersammelgebiet
Volks- & Völkerkunde

in Zusammenarbeit mit der DFG

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

CONTENTS

---

About the editors and authors	page x
Introduction	1
Mark Sheehan and Deirdre Quinn-Allan
Risk	2
Issues	3
Crisis	4
Assessing risk, recognising the issue and avoiding the crisis: Saving Australia's banks	5
1947–1949: Banking on victory	6
Case questions	8
Bibliography	8
 PART 1: UNDERSTANDING CRISIS AND ISSUES MANAGEMENT	 11
Chapter 1: Theorising and practising public relations crisis management	12
Steve Mackey
Introduction: When the crisis bells ring	12
Definitions and criticisms	13
Theory as models and procedures	15
Pre-crisis	15
Crisis response	19
Post-crisis	22
The overt protection of interests	23
The wide field of apologia theory	23
Conclusion	26
Case questions	27
Bibliography	27
 PART 2: INDUSTRIAL DISASTERS	 29
Chapter 2: Outrage management or consensus communication: What is the best way of doing risk communication?	30
Paul Adams
Introduction	30
Background	31
The Coode Island Community Consultative Committee	33
Communicating risk: Experts and the public	36
Conclusion	38

Case questions	38
Bibliography	39
Chapter 3: Confronting the reputation risks: New Zealand's biggest food safety scare	41
Chris Galloway
Introduction	41
The ripple effect of a crisis	42
Understanding the reputational risk	42
Reputation impacts: The ripples in the pond	44
Fonterra's perspective of the crisis	45
Media reaction to the crisis: The daily progression	46
The apology goes wrong	47
100% Pure? Damaging the national brand	48
In the end it was a false alarm . . .	49
Understanding and interpreting the crisis	49
In science we trust . . . too much?	50
Reputation: The ultimate loser in crisis	51
The stakeholder view	51
Conclusion	52
Case questions	53
Bibliography	53
PART 3: CORPORATE CRISIS	59
Chapter 4: Crisis communication: When sorry is the hardest word in elite sport	60
Hamish McLean and Maria Hopwood
Introduction	60
Case study: Into the inferno	61
Fans, connections and expectations	62
Personal transgressions forgiven only so far	64
A defence of attack	65
Confessing bad news	65
Previous reputation may not count	67
Controlling the message	67
Diverting attention	68
Conclusion	69
Case questions	69
Bibliography	70

Chapter 5: Corporate responses to a racially framed incident in Malaysia: The KFC i-City fight	73
Kiranjit Kaur
Introduction	73
Background	75
Case focus	76
Conclusion	78
Case questions	79
Bibliography	79
Chapter 6: Managing issues through cross-sector collaboration: Unilever and Greenpeace	80
Sharyn McDonald
Introduction	80
Cross-sector collaboration and issue management	81
Case background	84
Relationship portfolio	85
Conclusion	88
Case questions	88
Bibliography	89
PART 4: SOCIAL MEDIA AND CRISIS	93
Chapter 7: Media targets: When a spark in social media develops into a mainstream media firestorm	94
Kristy Hess and Lisa Waller
Introduction	94
Background	95
The changing nature of information subsidies	96
News values	97
Case focus	98
News values	99
Social media	100
Conclusion	104
Case questions	104
Bibliography	105
Chapter 8: Harnessing the power of slacktivism: The boom and bust cycle of issues management and crisis	107
Deirdre Quinn-Allan
Introduction	107
Background	108

Deforestation, consumers and supply chain slacktivism	110
Harnessing the power of slacktivism	111
Asia Pulp and Paper	112
Kony 12	114
Conclusion	116
Case questions	117
Bibliography	117
Chapter 9: Social media adoption and risk aversion: Australian not-for-profits	119
Emma Bennett
Introduction	119
Background	120
Case focus	120
Social media adoption and usage	121
The role of strategy development in risk aversion	126
Social media resources for NPOs	128
Conclusion	128
Case questions	129
Bibliography	129
PART 5: NATURAL DISASTERS	131
Chapter 10: Communicating during disasters: Insights from the 2013 Bundaberg flood	132
Amisha Mehta and Dominique A. Greer
Introduction	132
Background	133
What is risk communication during disasters?	134
Risk communication across the four phases of disasters	135
Risk communication in Bundaberg: Across the four phases	137
Risk, crisis and communication lessons learned	142
Conclusion	144
Case questions	144
Bibliography	145
Chapter 11: Government roles in emergency communication response	146
Jordi Xifra and Mark Sheehan
Introduction	146
Examining a crisis	146
Media coverage	148
Background of the crisis	148
Responsibility of government agencies	149

Specific emergency plans	149
Managing communication	151
Social media: A critical tool	152
Conclusion	155
Case questions	156
Bibliography	156
Chapter 12: Post-crisis: Rebuilding a company, a reputation, a community	158
Mark Sheehan and Biagio Oppi
Introduction	158
Physical or sudden crisis	159
A crisis on three fronts	161
The earthquakes: From one disaster to another	163
Target publics	164
'One Voice': Coordinated crisis communication	164
Conclusion: Outcomes and recovery	166
Case questions	167
Bibliography	167
Appendix: Answers to case questions	169
Index	182