

Fieldwork Dilemmas

Anthropologists in Postsocialist States

Edited by

Hermine G. De Soto

and

Nora Dudwick

THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN PRESS

Contents

Foreword: Ethnography and Postsocialism Nancy Ries	ix
Introduction Nora Dudwick and Hermine G. De Soto	3
Part 1. Fieldwork in Disintegrating and Reintegrating Nations and States	9
1. Postsocialism and the Fieldwork of War Nora Dudwick	13
2. Would the Real Nationalists Please Step Forward: Destructive Narration in Macedonia K. S. Brown	31
3. Telling Stories of Serbia: Native and Other Dilemmas on the Edge of Chaos Marko Živković	49
Part 2. Fieldworkers in the Postsocialist Field	69
4. Crossing Western Boundaries: How East Berlin Women Observed Women Researchers from the West after Socialism, 1991–1992 Hermine G. De Soto	73
5. Ethnographic Encounters in Post-Soviet Kyrgyzstan: Dilemmas of Gender, Poverty, and the Cold War Kathleen Kuehnast	100
6. When Text Becomes Field: Fieldwork in “Transitional” Societies Igor Barsegian	119

7. Fieldwork and the “Doctoring” of National Identities in Arctic Siberia David G. Anderson	130
Part 3. Negotiating Personal Relationships in the Postsocialist Field	149
8. Intruder in Uzbekistan: Walking the Line between Community Needs and Anthropological Desiderata Russell Zanca	153
9. Mixed Devotions: Religion, Friendship, and Fieldwork in Postsocialist Eastern Germany Daphne Berdahl	172
10. Researcher, Advocate, Friend: An American Fieldworker among Balkan Roma, 1980–1996 Carol Silverman	195
Afterword: Intimations from an Uncertain Place Michael Herzfeld	219
Contributors	239
Index	244