

The Future of Anthropology

Its Relevance to the Contemporary World

Edited by
Akbar S. Ahmed and Cris N. Shore

ATHLONE
London & Atlantic Highlands, NJ

Contents

Contributors	vi
Foreword: From Self-Appraise through Self-Criticism to Self-Confidence Jonathan Benthall	1
1 Introduction: Is Anthropology Relevant to the Contemporary World? Akbar S. Ahmed and Cris N. Shore	12
2 The Rise and Fall of Scientific Ethnography Anna Grimshaw and Keith Hart	46
3 Anthropology: Still the Uncomfortable Discipline? Susan Wright	65
4 Anthropologists for Sale? I.M. Lewis	94
5 Learning from AIDS: The Future of Anthropology Ronald Frankenberg	110
6 Feminist Anthropologies and Questions of Masculinity Andrea Cornwall and Nancy Lindisfarne	134
7 Tourism, Modernity and Nostalgia Nelson H.H. Graburn	158
8 Prospects for Tourism Study in Anthropology Dennison Nash	179
9 Lost Horizons Regained: Old Age and the Anthropology of Contemporary Society Haim Hazan	203
10 Cultural Imperialism and the Mediation of Otherness David Morley and Kevin Robins	228
11 After Emotion: Ethnic Cleansing in the Former Yugoslavia, and Beyond Stjepan G. Meštrović	251
12 Epilogue: Notes on the Future of Anthropology Anthony Giddens	272
Index	278