

Anthropologists in the Securityscape

Ethics, Practice, and Professional Identity

Editors

Robert Albro
George E. Marcus
Laura A. McNamara
Monica Schoch-Spana

Walnut Creek, CA

CONTENTS

Introduction	7
1 The Winds of Politics, Change, and Social Science Transformation in a Military Research Institution Rebecca Goolsby	15
2 Identity Management in the Federal Government: How an Andean Archaeologist Became a Social Scientist Charlene Milliken	27
3 Public Anthropology and Multitrack Dialoguing in the Securityscape Robert Albro	39
4 Blurring the Boundaries between Anthropology and Intelligence Analysis David Abramson	57
5 Intelligence Work: The Mundane World of High-Consequence Analysis Mark Dawson	71
6 Interdisciplinary Research in the National Laboratories Laura A. McNamara	87
7 Standing at the Crossroads of Anthropology, Public Health, and National Security Monica Schoch-Spana	101
8 Culture in/Culture of the United States Naval Academy Clementine Fujimura	115

9	Teaching Culture at Marine Corps University Paula Holmes-Eber	129
10	Protecting the Past to Secure the Future: An Archaeologist Working for the Army Laurie Rush	143
11	Staying Safe: Aid Work and Security in Afghanistan Patricia Omidian	155
12	On the Ethics of Graduated Disclosure in Contexts of War Flagg Miller	167
13	Ethical Considerations from the Study of Peacekeeping Robert A. Rubinstein	183
14	Hazardous Field Operations: Romanian-American Joint Humanitarian Training Peter Van Arsdale	197
15	Retaining Intellectual Integrity: Introducing Anthropology to the National Security Community Jessica Glickenturnley	213
16	How Critical Should Critical Thinking Be? Teaching Soldiers in Wartime Anna Simons	231
	Conclusion	245
	“Be All That You Can Be...”: The Anthropological Vocation in the Securityscape George E. Marcus
	Index	259
	About the Editors	275