

EXHIBIT IRELAND:
ETHNOGRAPHIC COLLECTIONS IN IRISH MUSEUMS

Edited by

Séamas Ó Síocháin, Pauline Garvey and Adam Drazin

Wordwell

Contents

Preface	vii
Notes on contributors	ix
1. Introduction: Ireland's new ethnographic horizons Pauline Garvey, Séamas Ó Síocháin and Adam Drazin	1
 PART ONE: ETHNOGRAPHIC COLLECTIONS—THE 'OTHER'
2. From empire to independence: the ethnographic collections of the National Museum of Ireland Rachel Hand	23
3. The view from Fort Thornton: the O'Beirne Collection in the National Museum of Ireland Bill Hart	57
4. Here, there and everywhere: the origins of the Ulster Museum's ethnographic collection Winifred Glover	65
 PART TWO: ETHNOGRAPHIC COLLECTIONS—THE 'FOLK'
5. Archives and artefacts: collecting, collections and ethnography in an Irish and comparative European context Diarmuid Ó Giolláin	81
6. Bygones and relics and museum acquisitions: some thoughts on the Irish Folklife Collection in the National Museum of Ireland Anne O'Dowd	105
7. Telling stories with objects: ethnographic collections at the Ulster Folk and Transport Museum Anthony D. Buckley	127

PART THREE: THE CHALLENGE OF THE FUTURE

8. The comfort of things Gosewijn van Beek	143
9. Finding long-lost relatives (making the absent present): on the potentialities of North American ethnographic collections in Ireland Laura Peers	157
10. Imperious post-colonialism: dealing with the National Museum of Ireland's non-European collections in a Free State Pat Cooke	171
Index	187