

Why Forage?

HUNTERS AND GATHERERS IN
THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY

Edited by Brian F. Coddling and Karen L. Kramer

Sondersammelgebiet
Volks- & Völkerkunde
in Zusammenarbeit mit der DFG

SCHOOL FOR ADVANCED RESEARCH PRESS • SANTA FE

UNIVERSITY OF NEW MEXICO PRESS • ALBUQUERQUE

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS	vii
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	xi
INTRODUCTION Hunters and Gatherers in the Twenty-First Century	1
Karen L. Kramer and Brian F. Codding
CHAPTER ONE Diversify or Replace: What Happens to Wild Foods When Cultigens Are Introduced into Hunter-Gatherer Diets?	15
Karen L. Kramer and Russell D. Greaves
CHAPTER TWO Inuit Culture: To Have and Have Not; or, Has Subsistence Become an Anachronism?	43
George W. Wenzel
CHAPTER THREE “In the bush the food is free”: The Ju/’hoansi of Tsumkwe in the Twenty-First Century	61
Richard B. Lee
CHAPTER FOUR Twenty-First-Century Hunting and Gathering among Western and Central Kalahari San	89
Robert K. Hitchcock and Maria Sapignoli
CHAPTER FIVE Why Do So Few Hadza Farm?	113
Nicholas Blurton Jones
CHAPTER SIX In Pursuit of the Individual: Recent Economic Opportunities and the Persistence of Traditional Forager-Farmer Relationships in the Southwestern Central African Republic	137
Karen D. Lupo
CHAPTER SEVEN What Now? Big Game Hunting, Economic Change, and the Social Strategies of Bardi Men	167
James E. Coxworth
CHAPTER EIGHT Alternative Aboriginal Economies: Martu Livelihoods in the Twenty-First Century	185
Brian F. Codding, Rebecca Bliege Bird, Douglas W. Bird, and David W. Zeanah

CHAPTER NINE Economic, Social, and Ecological Contexts of Hunting, Sharing, and Fire in the Western Desert of Australia	213
Rebecca Bliege Bird, Brian F. Coddling, and Douglas W. Bird
APPENDIX A Cross-Cultural Demographic and Social Variables for Contemporary Foraging Populations	231
APPENDIX B Economic Activities of Twenty-First-Century Foraging Populations	241
REFERENCES	263
CONTRIBUTORS	321
INDEX	325