

THE ANTHROPOLOGY OF CHINA

China as Ethnographic and Theoretical Critique

Sonderdruck aus:

Volke- & Volkskunde

in Zusammenarbeit mit der DFG

Charlotte Bruckermann
Stephan Feuchtwang

London School of Economics, UK

Imperial College Press

Contents

About the Authors		v
Chapter 1	Introduction	1
	1.1 Outline of the Contents	2
Chapter 2	Anthropology of China: History, Regionalism, and Comparison	9
	2.1 Anthropology's Crisis of Representation	11
	2.2 Ethnographic Authority and the Regionalization of Anthropology	14
	2.3 Revolution and Reform in the Anthropology of China	17
	2.4 Regionalization from a Chinese Perspective	21
	2.5 Fei and the Study of Chinese Society	24
	2.6 Fei's Non-western Sociological Theory of China	26
	2.7 Moral Crisis and Individual Ethics	31
	2.8 China in a Changing World	35
Chapter 3	Kinship as Ideology and as Corporation	39
	3.1 Developing Cognition between Individual and Ideology	40
	3.2 Chinese Kinship from Family to Lineage	47
	3.3 Changes from above: The Role of Neo-Confucian Ideologies	53
	3.4 Bottom-up Rites as Drivers of Change	56

	3.5 The State, Laws, and Taxes in Kinship as Patricorporation	61
	3.6 Development of Historical Consciousness	65
	3.7 Conclusion	68
Chapter 4	Relatedness and Gender	71
	4.1 From Kinship to Relatedness	72
	4.2 Nurturing Reciprocity	78
	4.3 Engendering Desire	82
	4.4 Families Women Create	85
	4.5 Migration and Gendered Spaces	88
	4.6 Family Planning	90
	4.7 From Holism to Partial Processes	95
Chapter 5	Love, Emotion and Sentiment	99
	5.1 Love as Transcendence of the Self	100
	5.2 Love as Knowledge Revealed and Concealed	101
	5.3 How Structural is Love in China?	103
	5.4 Expressing Emotion through Action and Words	105
	5.5 Love between Passion and Affection	107
	5.6 The Romantic Revolution	108
	5.7 Romantic Scripts, Sex, and the City	110
	5.8 Affection and Dependence between Parents and Children	113
	5.9 Patriotism as Love Extended	115
	5.10 Love and Emotion in China	116
Chapter 6	The Exchange of Money, Gifts, and Favors	119
	6.1 Money and the Morality of Exchange	120
	6.2 Money in Chinese History	123
	6.3 Rural Relationships	130
	6.4 Urban Connections	132
	6.5 Status, Merit, and Self-Interest	133
	6.6 Elite Networks	135
	6.7 Kinship and Property	137
	6.8 Conclusion	139

Chapter 7	The Localization and Globalization of Food	143
	7.1 Chinese Cooking and Cuisines in Comparison	144
	7.2 National Cuisines on a Global Stage	146
	7.3 Chinese Food as World Cuisine	150
	7.4 The Generation Gap at the Table	153
	7.5 Inside and Outside Culinary Principles	156
	7.6 Localism from Cooking to Cuisine	158
	7.7 Consumer Culture and Corporate Food	160
	7.8 Faith, Food, and Identity	164
	7.9 Eating Modernity and Consuming Exoticism	166
Chapter 8	Nature, Environment, and Activism	171
	8.1 The Dualism of Nature and Culture	173
	8.2 Globalizing Nature in China and Taiwan	176
	8.3 Social Justice in Environmental Protest	180
	8.4 Compensation for Industrial Pollution	183
	8.5 Reason and Law in Rural Resource Management	184
	8.6 Global Environmentalism and fengshui	186
	8.7 Social Harmony Beyond Nature–Culture Dualism	188
Chapter 9	Ritual and Belief	191
	9.1 Government by Rite	192
	9.2 Ritual and Ideology	193
	9.3 Belief and Ritual Practice: Orthodoxy and Orthopraxy	198
	9.4 So, are We Actually Talking about the Influence of Writing and a State?	200
	9.5 Liberal Modernity, Ritual and the Cult of Sincerity	203
	9.6 Maoist Political Ritual	204
	9.7 Funerals Post-Mao	207
Chapter 10	Hospitality	213
	10.1 The Constraint to Share and Be Generous: The Basis of Civilization	213
	10.2 Altruism: The Impossible Gift on the Ultimate Scale of Humanity	215

10.3	An Anthropological Study of Hospitality	216
10.4	Imperial Chinese Guest Ritual	217
10.5	Chinese Anthropologies of Hospitality	220
10.6	Guest as a Parasite; Host as a Poisoner	222
10.7	Hosting Gods, Ghosts and Other Guests	223
Chapter 11	The Stranger-King and the Outside of an Imperial Civilization	227
11.1	The Theme of the Stranger-King	228
11.2	Heteronomy	230
11.3	The Outside of Tianxia — All Under Heaven	232
11.4	Ethnography of a Border Region	235
11.5	The Wild: Another View of the Center from the Margin	239
11.6	Conclusion	241
Chapter 12	The Anthropology of the Modern State in China	243
12.1	Some Benchmark Characteristics of Modern States	246
12.2	China's Formation as an East Asian State	247
12.3	Not Fleeing but Keeping a Negotiable Distance: Local Cultures in the PRC	249
12.4	Further Cases of Cultural Distancing and Cultural Incorporation	252
12.5	The Bai of Dali and their Culture in the New Dispensation	254
12.6	The Villages of Bashan in Enshi	257
12.7	An Indisputably Han Local Study	260
12.8	Conclusion	261
Chapter 13	Conclusion	263
	Index	269