

Connecting Women's Histories

The Local and the Global

Edited by
Barbara Bush and June Purvis

Contents

Citation Information	vii
Notes on Contributors	ix
Introduction – Connecting Women’s Histories: the local and the global Barbara Bush and June Purvis	1
1. Feminising Empire? British Women’s Activist Networks in Defending and Challenging Empire from 1918 to Decolonisation Barbara Bush	7
2. ‘The Women’s Branch of the Commonwealth Relations Office’: the Society for the Overseas Settlement of British Women and the long life of empire migration Jean P. Smith	28
3. ‘Going on with our little movement in the hum drum-way which alone is possible in a land like this’: Olive Schreiner and suffrage networks in Britain and South Africa, 1905–1913 Helen Dampier	44
4. From Settlers to Strays: white Zimbabwean women, historical memory and belonging in the diaspora c.1980–2010 Kate Law	59
5. ‘Belles from Bristol and Bournville in New Surroundings’: female confectionery workers as transnational agents, 1918–1928 Emma Robertson	71
6. ‘Immorality’, Nationalism and the Colonial State in British Malaya: Indian ‘coolie’ women’s intimate lives as ideological battleground Arunima Datta	91
7. International and Modern Ideals in Irish Female Medical Missionary Activity, 1937–1962 Ailish Veale	109
8. ‘The salvation of them’: emigration to North America from the nineteenth-century Irish women’s convict prison Elaine Farrell	126
9. The Women’s Party of Great Britain (1917–1919): a forgotten episode in British women’s political history June Purvis	145

CONTENTS

10. The National and International in Making a Feminist: the case of Alexandra Gripenberg Tiina Kinnunen	159
11. From Hiroshima to Lausanne: the World Congress of Mothers and the Hahaoya Taikai in the 1950s Vera Mackie	177
Index	201