

Dethroning historical reputations

Universities, museums and the commemoration of benefactors

Edited by
Jill Pellew and Lawrence Goldman

FD SOZIAL- UND
KULTURANTHROPOLOGIE
in Zusammenarbeit mit der

LONDON
INSTITUTE OF HISTORICAL RESEARCH

Contents

List of illustrations	v
Preface	vii
Notes on contributors	xi
1. Introduction David Cannadine	1
2. Commentary on universities, museums and the commemoration of benefactors Jill Pellew	15
3. The English civic universities: endowments and the commemoration of benefactors H. S. Jones	25
4. Donors to an imperial project: Randalors as benefactors to the Royal School of Mines, Imperial College of Science and Technology Jill Pellew	35
5. The expectations of benefactors and a responsibility to endow John Shakeshaft	47
6. The funder's perspective Victoria Harrison	57
7. Calibrating relevance at the Pitt Rivers Museum Laura N. K. Van Broekhoven	65
8. From objects of enlightenment to objects of apology: why you can't make amends for the past by plundering the present Tiffany Jenkins	81
9. British universities and Caribbean slavery Nicholas Draper	93
10. Risk and reputation: the London blue plaques scheme Anna Eavis and Howard Spencer	107

Dethroning historical reputations

11.	'A dreary record of wickedness': moral judgement in history Brian Young	117
12.	We have been here before: 'Rhodes Must Fall' in historical context Lawrence Goldman	125
	Bibliography	141
	Index	145