

UMA KOTHARI | editor

A radical history of development studies

Individuals, institutions and ideologies

ZED

Contents

Acknowledgements | xi

Preface to the second edition | xiii

- 1 A radical history of development studies: individuals, institutions and ideologies . . . . . 1

UMA KOTHARI

Why a radical history of development studies? | 1 Understanding development studies | 3 What the book says | 7

one | Individuals and institutions . . . . . 15

- 2 Great promise, hubris and recovery: a participant's history of development studies . . . . . 17

JOHN HARRISS

Prologomenon: the era of the 'positivist orthodoxy' | 19
The promise of development studies | 23 Hubris in the 1980s? | 30
Reinvention in the 1990s and the challenge of Act V | 36
Conclusion: critical engagement with globalization | 38

- 3 From colonial administration to development studies: a post-colonial critique of the history of development studies. . . . . 47

UMA KOTHARI

Understanding the colonial legacy of development studies | 48
Obscuring a colonial genealogy | 50 Memory, narratives and history | 52 From colonial administration to development studies | 55 Continuities and divergences | 61

- 4 Critical reflections of a development nomad . . . . . 67

ROBERT CHAMBERS

Nomad and journey | 68 Reflections | 73 A radical agenda for future development studies: qualifications, caveats and context | 80 Conclusion: a radical reconfiguration? | 82

- 5 Secret diplomacy uncovered: research on the World Bank in the 1960s and 1980s . . . . . 88

TERESA HAYTER

The purposes of aid: early illusions at the Overseas Development Institute | 88 Research on the World Bank: an encounter with reality | 91 Reality is not for publication: the World Bank's attempts to 'bury' the ODI report | 95 The World Bank revisited | 99 The World Bank is finally exposed | 107

two | Ideas and ideologies . . . . . 109

- 6 Development studies and the Marxists . . . . . 111

HENRY BERNSTEIN

Development studies I. The founding moment: big issues and big ideas | 112 Development studies II. The age of neo-liberalism: how less becomes more, and more less | 115 And the Marxists? I. Political struggle and intellectual dynamism | 121 And the Marxists? II. Political defeats and beyond | 126 Conclusion | 130

- 7 Journeying in radical development studies: a reflection on thirty years of researching pro-poor development . . . . . 138

JOHN CAMERON

The original context | 139 The mid-1970s: Marxian modes of production analysis | 140 The early 1980s: engaging with a potentially developmentalist state | 142 Later 1980s: malign external hands and neo-liberal resource allocation priorities | 144 The early 1990s: thinking development anew, ancient and postmodern | 147 The mid-1990s: closely observing poverty | 149 The late 1990s: back to basics | 150 The present looking to the future | 151

- 8 The rise and rise of gender and development . . . . . 157

RUTH PEARSON

The birth of gender | 158 Integrating gender into development analysis and planning | 160 From equality to empowerment | 163 Mainstreaming gender in international development | 166 What is the development agenda that needs gendering? | 168 Is it better to travel hopefully than to arrive? | 175

- 9 Development studies, nature and natural resources: changing narratives and discursive practices. . . . . 180

PHIL WOODHOUSE AND ADMOS CHIMHOWU

Colonial administration and the management of nature | 181
Modernist and populist narratives | 183 The crisis of modernization and the rise of populist environmentalism: the 1970s and 1980s | 187 'Incorporated environmentalism' and political ecology: the 1990s | 192 Conclusion | 195

- 10 Individuals, organizations and public action: trajectories of the 'non-governmental' in development studies . . . . . 200

DAVID LEWIS

Encountering the non-governmental | 200 NGOs in development studies | 203 Re-remembering hidden histories? | 207 Problems of NGO research in development studies | 209 Looking back at the rise of non-governmentalism | 214 Conclusion | 215

About the contributors | 222

Index | 226