

Modernism, Self-Creation, and the Maternal

The Mother's Son

James Martell

 Routledge
Taylor & Francis Group

NEW YORK AND LONDON

Contents

	Acknowledgements	xii
	Introduction	1
1	The Anxiety of the Son Incorporating Metis 6 As Many Matricides as Sons 11	6
2	Baudelaire's Mother as Counterfeit Coin The Inherited Coin 25 The Conseil Judiciaire 29 Birth and Death of the Mother and Son 33 The Conseil as Purloined Letter 41	25
3	The Age of Grammatology and the Epoch of the Writer-Son We Were Born in 1967, 1712, and 1765–67 55 New Rule of Life 60 Morella Modernist Mother 64	55
4	Writing without Matricide Who Writes (I) in Literature, Philosophy, and Psychoanalysis 77 White Agony, Youthful Urgency, Dawn Itself 80 Sans Alibi: Without Other Place 92 The Tongue Rests In 96	77
5	The Logic of Pregnancy, Beckett's Œuvre Inside Glas After the Singular Step 106 Mothers Pregnant with Each Other 110 The Effects of AgGLutination 117	106

x Contents

The Theatre of Theory and Its Procession 122

The Living Remains: The Proper Names 127

The Mimetic Rhythm as Theoretical Site 130

Blind Remains: Conceiving Thought 134

6 Writing as Image: The Maternal Tattoo 153

With Her Eyes 153

Idiomatic Images: Irezumi 156

Index 171