

Transatlantic Trade and Global Cultural Transfers Since 1492

More than Commodities

Edited by Martina Kaller and Frank Jacob

Contents

Notes on contributors vii

Introduction: commodity trade, globalization, and the making of the Atlantic World 1
FRANK JACOB AND MARTINA KALLER

SECTION I
Changing food habits 13

1 Chasing chocolate: transfers, transformations, and continuities in the history of cacao 15
JOHN S. HENDERSON AND KATHRYN M. HUDSON

2 Flavors and colors: the chili pepper in Europe 30
ESTHER KATZ

3 The Jazz Age, Neapolitans, and primitivism: futurist cuisine at the Exposition coloniale internationale (1931) 54
MARIANA AGUIRRE

SECTION II
New consumer societies 71

4 Tobacco: a transatlantic commodity and its cultural impact in the early modern world 73
FRANK JACOB

5 Coca leaf transfers to Europe: effects on the consumption of coca in North-western Argentina 106
RICARDO ABDUCA

SECTION III

Knowledge and representation 127

- 6 Peyote and ololiuhqui in the medical texts of New Spain and their circulation in Spain during the 16th and 17th centuries 129

ANGÉLICA MORALES-SARABIA

- 7 The pride of Lippitzbach: multiple spaces of knowledge and meanings of the Amazon water lily, from the Amazon Basin to Carinthia (Austria) 150

MARIANNE KLEMUN

- 8 When the tomato was purely ornamental: considering New World foods in 17th-century Berlin 172

MOLLY TAYLOR-POLESKEY

- 9 Unlocking platinum: early European struggles with a colonial metal 189

NOAH BENNINGA

Index 208