

NEW DIRECTIONS FOR HIGHER EDUCATION

Martin Kramer
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Best Practices in Higher Education Consortia: How Institutions Can Work Together

Lawrence G. Dotolo
Virginia Tidewater Consortium for Higher Education

Jean T. Strandness
Tri-College University

EDITORS

Number 106, Summer 1999

JOSSEY-BASS PUBLISHERS
San Francisco

CONTENTS

EDITORS' NOTES	1
Lawrence G. Dotolo, Jean T. Strandness
1. Starting and Sustaining a Consortium	3
Frederick Baus, Claire A. Ramsbottom
Ensuring the survival and effectiveness of an academic consortium is a complex endeavor, but institutions are more likely to reap the benefits of collaboration if they follow certain steps.
2. The Role of the Consortium Director	19
Thomas R. Horgan
What a consortium director needs to do to succeed and the director's primary focus are explored—from clearly communicating a consortium's mission to securing resources.
3. Library Cooperation	27
Neil R. Wylie, Tamara L. Yeager
Library cooperation is described in two consortia with extensive library programs; various ways college and university libraries can work together to enhance library access and share resources are suggested.
4. Cross-Registration and Joint Academic Programs	37
Jean T. Strandness
The development of a cross-registration system and the formation of joint academic programs create a variety of educational opportunities for students and provide a number of direct and indirect benefits to a consortium's member institutions.
5. Collaborative Admissions and Recruitment Practices	45
Barbara Bradley Stonewater
Collaborative admissions and recruitment practices in colleges and universities are possible, even among institutions that compete for students.
6. Faculty Development: Working Together to Improve Teaching and Learning	51
Lawrence G. Dotolo
The evolution of a consortial faculty development program and the important factors necessary to have a successful program are discussed.

7. Consortial Fundraising	59
Lorna M. Peterson
More and more foundations, both private and public, are encouraging institutions of higher education to work together, even in their fundraising efforts.
8. Cooperation for Cost-Effectiveness in Purchasing	67
Mitch Dorger
One way to approach cost control is by taking advantage of cooperative activities with other, similar institutions.
9. Statewide Consortia for the Use of Technology	79
Patricia Widmayer
Consortia are pivotal vehicles with which colleges and universities, schools, museums, and libraries can acquire advanced technology for teaching, learning, research, and administration.
10. Technology, Consortia, and the Relationship Revolution in Education	85
Galen C. Godbey, Gerald J. Richter
Educational consortia are joining the rush to obtain new telecommunications and learning technologies, which must be adopted within a paradigm of organizational agility.
11. Economic Development and Consortia	93
Allan Watson, Linda Jordan
Examples of workforce training and education projects that support regional economic development are outlined to demonstrate successful business-higher education collaboration.
12. Cooperating Internationally	101
Wayne Anderson
Multi-institutional cooperation is now taking place on an international scale; suggestions for successful ventures are offered as are warnings about the pitfalls that undermine such initiatives.
13. What Small Colleges Can Do Together	109
Anneke J. Larrance
Small colleges in consortium are an important method of extending resources, although such beneficial arrangements are easily overlooked.
Annotated Bibliography	117
The works represented in this selected bibliography together discuss the major historical and contemporary issues and themes pertinent to inter-institutional collaboration and consortia.
INDEX	121