

International Student Activism and the Politics of Higher Education

Edited by CindyAnn Rose-Redwood and Reuben Rose-Redwood

LEXINGTON BOOKS
Lanham • Boulder • New York • London

Contents

Tables and Figures	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction: Reimagining the Political Lives of International Students CindyAnn Rose-Redwood and Reuben Rose-Redwood	1
Chapter 1: Korean Student Revolutionaries in the United States, 1919–1937 Jean H. Park	19
Chapter 2: Chinese International Student Activism in the United States: The Case of the Independent Federation of Chinese Students and Scholars Shu Wan	33
Chapter 3: A Collaborative Autoethnography: Two International Graduate Students' Journeys of Developing a Commitment to Racial and Social Justice Sarang Kim and Gaurav Harshe	45
Chapter 4: The Role of Higher Education Institutions in Supporting Student Activism: A Duoethnography of Two Racialized International Students Ha B. Dong and Cintia C. Damasceno	63
Chapter 5: Burnt Out, Tokenized, yet Empowering: How Two International Student Advocates Engaged in Activism Yi Xuen Tay and Meena Pannirselvam	81

Chapter 6: “Another Way to Raise Awareness”: Narratives of Activism and its Risks among LGBTQIA International Students Andrew S. Herridge, Hugo A. García, and Mi Chelle Leong	101
Chapter 7: “To See if the Experiment with Institutionalizing Democratic Rules Would Work”: Chinese International Students’ Engagement with Democracy in US Higher Education Institutions Gang Li	117
Chapter 8: “It’s Easier to See What’s Missing” or “It’s Not Our Space to Contest”? How Social and Cultural Capital Shape Political Engagement for International Students Marian Counihan, Maria Ioannou, and Naomi de Ruiter	133
Chapter 9: Going Against the Grain: Lessons from International Graduate Students, Scholars, and Allies at the University of Maryland–College Park Emmanuel Wanjala, Jia Zheng, and Annie Rappeport	155
Chapter 10: The Politics of Higher Education Immigration: Applying a Narrative Policy Framework to Examine Advocacy Efforts for International Students during the COVID-19 Pandemic Anita Gopal	177
Chapter 11: “That Can Come Back to Haunt You”: Student Visas and Study Permits as Perceived Impediments to Political Activism among International Students Max Crumley-Effinger	201
Chapter 12: Not “Passive Bystanders”: Exploring the Spaces of International Students’ Political Engagements Johanna L. Waters	219
Conclusion: From Political Void to a Politics of Possibility: Developing a Research Agenda for the Study of International Student Politics CindyAnn Rose-Redwood and Reuben Rose-Redwood	239
Index	249
About the Contributors	267